

Level Up Your Leadership Skills in Clinical Practice

Leading from Within: Essential Leadership Competencies for Nurses at Every Level propels nurses further in their career and boosts institution-wide performance.

is the number one leadership-related skill med-surg nurses can and should develop.

Leadership is a valued skill among med-surg nurses, but it isn't always a skill that is universally taught.

Strong leadership ability leads to greater teamwork, collaboration, institutional and individual growth, and overall success.

Relational leadership, which focuses on interactions and connections with patients, is shown to improve outcomes.

A focus on clinical nurse leadership contributes to a highly reliable organization.

Nurses with leadership training demonstrate greater flexibility, higher levels of optimism, and improved patient care.

Leading from Within addresses these concerns by delivering a high-level certificate course to med-surg nurses in clinical practice. Grow practical leadership skills, achieve better outcomes, and contribute more to your institution with this expert-designed course.

We look forward to having you join us in taking your med-surg learning to the next level. Want to explore more about Leading from Within or the AMSN Elevate Series, or have a question? Let's connect.
